MAUSER, the leading global industrial packaging specialist, has announced a change at its executive level. CEO Stefan Müller-Arends decided to leave the company after 11 years and will be replaced by Dr. Clemens Willée, former Head of BASF's global Styrenics business.

After 11 years of successful service, Stefan Müller-Arends (50) leaves MAUSER for personal reasons in order to take up new challenges. He was the mastermind behind the growth strategy that turned the company into the market leader in industrial packaging that it is today.

Stefan Müller-Arends will be replaced by Dr. Clemens Willée (46) as Chief Executive Officer. Willée has held various senior management positions both within BASF, where he spent almost 12 years, and with Dystar, a spinoff of the chemical groups Hoechst, Bayer and BASF, where he spent 6 years, including 2 years as Chief Executive Officer. Most recently Dr. Willée headed BASF's global Styrenics business. Dr. Willée's management experience will be invaluable in the further development of MAUSER as he leads its strategic drive towards continued international expansion and operating excellence.
